2002-2007 Buick Rendezvous | Easy | 10 minutes | $28 DIY

TOOLS

No tools required - the panel, access door, and filters all release by hand  bag or rag to catch debris falling from the old filters

PARTS

Cabin air filters (pair) for 2002-2007 Buick Rendezvous; verify arrows, size, and VIN/trim fitment $28.00

STEPS

1. Open and empty the glove box - Open the passenger-side glove box door and take everything out. The cabin filter is accessed from inside the glove compartment itself - you never go under the hood or under the dash.
2. Find the removable panel on the left side - Look at the left inside wall of the open glove box. This panel covers the filter access door - do not confuse it with the glove box light or any other trim piece inside the box.
3. Pull the tab and remove the panel - The panel pops free on small clips - set it aside where it will not get stepped on. If it resists, wiggle it side to side than yanking straight out; the clips are small and will crack if forced.
4. Open the filter access door - Pull outward on the latch on the door's left side, then swing the door open to the right on its hinge. The Rendezvous uses two slim filters stacked together in the slot rather than one thick one.
5. Slide out both old filters - Grip the exposed edge of the first filter and slide it straight out, then slide out the second. Note the airflow arrow on each filter's frame before you toss them.
6. Install the two new filters - Slide the two new filters into the slot in the same orientation as the old ones came out, following the airflow arrows printed on the frames.
7. Close up and test - Swing the access door shut until the left-side latch clicks, press the removable panel back into the glove box wall, and close the glove box. Start the engine, run the fan through all speeds, and confirm strong, quiet airflow at the vents.
